

1 On or about March 13, 2005, Metro Health Department (Nashville 2 Tennessee) found K.PFISTER filleting fish intended for wholesale to 3 local restaurants in his backyard in violation of numerous health 4 ordinances. At that time, K.PFISTER was doing business as "Taste of 5 New Orleans", a company licensed in Louisiana and owned by G. PFISTER.
6 (See Exhibit 66)

7 On or about March 15, 2005, K.PFISTER telephoned police from the 8 6389 Temple Road residence in Tennessee that was previously owned by he 9 and SEARLE and purchased out of foreclosure by G. PFISTER back in 10 January of 1998. He reported to police that ALEXIS was missing at 11 roughly 7:47 a.m. Roughly forty (40) minutes later, ALEXIS was found 12 on her school bus on her way to school. (See Exhibit 67)

13 On or about June 20, 2005, the Tennessee Supreme Court granted 14 SEARLE's request for review of the Tennessee Court of Appeal's refusal 15 to hear her appeal of HOOVER's July 3, 2001 "criminal contempt" and 16 custody orders because she was a fugitive from the State of Tennessee.

3 "Child custody proceeding" means a proceeding in which legal

5 issue. (See California Family Code Section 3402(d) and Tennessee Code
6 Annotated Section 36-6-205(d))

7 "Home State" means the state in which a child lived with a parent 8 or person as a parent for at least six consecutive months immediately 9 before the commencement of a child custody proceeding. (See California
10 Family Code Section 3402(g) and Tennessee Code Annotated Section 36-6- 11 205(g)).

12 California has jurisdiction to make an initial child custody 13 determination only if any of the following are true:

- 14 (1) California is the home state of the child on the date of the 15 commencement of the proceeding...

16 (See California Family Code Section 3421 and Tennessee Code Annotated
17 Section 36-6-216)

18 In this case, the dispute over custody of ALEXIS began on or about 19 October 19, 1997 in Tennessee. As all the parties were residents of 20 Tennessee, there can be no doubt that it was ALEXIS' home state for 21 purposes of custody issues under the UCCJEA. However, on June 23, 22 1999, HOOVER granted SEARLE's request to relocate with ALEXIS to 23 California with her fiancé. In doing so, HOOVER correctly noted that 24 pursuant to the UCCJEA, Tennessee would lose jurisdiction in this case 25 after ALEXIS had resided in California for six months (See pg. 87 lines 26 20-22 of Transcript included as Exhibit 24). Pursuant to HOOVER's 27 order, SEARLE and ALEXIS became residents of California on or about 28

1 June 25, 1999. And on or about December 25, 1999, California became 2 ALEXIS' home state for purposes of custody issues under the UCCJEA. As 3 a result, California was the proper forum for consideration of 4 K.PFISTER's March 9, 2000 motions regarding visitation and custody 5 without some additional finding that California was either an 6 inconvenient forum or Tennessee still had substantial connections to 7 this dispute that warranted continued jurisdiction in that state.

9 LITIGATION OF CUSTODY ISSUES RELATED TO ALEXIS SEARLE (aka: PFISTER)
10 AND THERE THERE WERE NO SIGNIFICANT CONNECTIONS WHICH WARRANTED

12 INCONVENIENT FORUM

13 In determining if a state is an inconvenient forum, a court shall 14 consider whether it is appropriate for a court of another state to 15 exercise jurisdiction. For this purpose, the court shall allow the 16 parties to submit information and shall consider all relevant factors, 17 including:

- 18 (1) Whether domestic violence had occurred and is likely to 19 continue in the future and which state could best protect the 20 parties.
- 21 (2) The length of time the child has resided outside the state.
- 22 (3) The distance between the court in the state and the court in 23 the state that would assume jurisdiction.
- 24 (4) The degree of financial hardship to the parties in litigating 25 in one forum over the other.
- 26 (5) Any agreement of the parties as to which state should assume 27 jurisdiction.
- 28 (6) The nature and location of the evidence required to resolve the pending litigation, including testimony of the child.
- (7) The ability of the court of each state to decide the issue expeditiously and the procedure necessary to present the evidence.

1 (8) The familiarity of the court of each state with the facts and 2 issues in the pending litigation.

3 (See California Family Code Section 3427 and Tennessee Codes Annotated
4 Section 36-6-222)

5 In this case, the application of the above factors leave 6 absolutely no doubt that as of December 25, 1999, Tennessee was an 7 inconvenient forum and California was far more suited to address the 8 current custody and visitation issues in this case. There was a prior 9 history of domestic violence between SEARLE and K.PFISTER. California, 10 as the home of SEARLE and ALEXIS was obviously far better suited to 11 protect them from any further violence. As of December 25, 1999, 12 ALEXIS and SEARLE had resided in California for nearly nine months.
13 There can be no doubt that the distance between Tennessee and 14 California was substantial and that this distance would create 15 tremendous financial hardship for SEARLE were she ordered to travel 16 back and forth with ALEXIS in order to litigate future custody 17 disputes. Pursuant to HOOVER's June 23, 1999 ruling, the Tennessee 18 court clearly indicated it was to lose jurisdiction in six months and 19 California would then be the proper forum for future custody issues.
20 All evidence regarding ALEXIS' school, medical/psychological care, 21 relationships, and home was in California. As such, California was far 22 better suited to decide any custody issues expeditiously.

23 The single criteria that favored Tennessee was that the Williamson 24 County Juvenile Court was obviously more familiar with the history of 25 this case. However, there can be no doubt that the California court 26 could easily get up to speed on this case by simply reviewing the 27 available court records and transcripts. To suggest that all of the 28 other factors should be ignored simply because of the Tennessee court's

1 familiarity with the case is contrary to the intended purpose of the 2 UCCJEA. Simply stated, by December 25, 1999, ALEXIS' home and life were 3 in California and as such, that state was the appropriate forum for 4 litigating any custody disputes. In contrast, Tennessee had long since 5 become an inconvenient forum for everyone except K. PFISTER.

6 SUBSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

7 (2) A court of another state does not have jurisdiction under 8 paragraph (1), or a court of the home state has declined to 9 exercise jurisdiction on the grounds that this state is the 10 more appropriate forum under 3427 or 3428, and both of the 11 following are true:

12 (A) The child and the child's parents, or the child 13 and at least one parent or a person acting as a 14 parent, have a significant connection with this 15 state other than physical presence.

16 (B) Substantial evidence is available in this state 17 concerning the child's care, protection, 18 training, and personal relationships.

19 (See California Family Code Section 3421 and Tennessee Code Annotated
20 Section 36-6-216)

21 By December 25, 1999, ALEXIS' life was in California with SEARLE.
22 Other than the presence of her father in Tennessee, ALEXIS had no 23 connection whatsoever with Tennessee. Her school, her friends, her 24 doctors, her home, and her activities were all in California. As such, 25 there can be no credible argument that Tennessee was the more 26 appropriate forum for litigation of custody issues after December 25, 27 1999.

4           It is well settled that a Tennessee judgment or order entered 5 without subject matter jurisdiction is void. Gentry v. Gentry (Tenn.
6 1996) 924 S.W.2d 678, 680. If Tennessee did not have jurisdiction at 7 the filing of a petition, other orders issued after that initial 8 petition were also invalid. Lee v. Lee 2004 WL 3021107 (2004 9 Tennessee Court of Appeals) (Attached herein)

10           In Lee, the parties were married in California in 1990. They 11 moved to Memphis Tennessee in 1993. Their son William was born in 12 Tennessee in 1994. On or about September of 1997, petitioner moved 13 to California with the child. As she had not been in California for 14 the requisite six months to establish home state jurisdiction, Bertha 15 Lee filed for divorce and custody in Tennessee in December of 1997.
16 The Tennessee court enters final divorce decree and awarded custody to 17 Bertha Lee in 1999. A Tennessee appeals court affirmed that ruling 18 later that same year. (See pages 1-2 of Lee v. Lee attached herein).

19           In November of 2001, Daniel Lee filed a petition for contempt and 20 custody change in Tennessee. This filing triggered a long and 21 contentious litigation history spanning nearly three years in a 22 Tennessee court. During that litigation, the Tennessee court addressed 23 allegations of parental mental illness, abuse of the child, termination 24 of visitation, and a myriad of legal issues raised by Daniel Lee.
25 During this litigation, Bertha Lee repeatedly questioned whether the 26 Tennessee court had jurisdiction to hear the matter. And in March of 27 2003, the court held that it lacked jurisdiction over the custody 28 issues and that California was the appropriate forum. Daniel Lee

1 appealed this decision. (See pages 2-6 of Lee v. Lee attached herein).

2 In affirming the trial court's decision, the Tennessee Court of 3 Appeals reasoned that the "home state of the child is one of the most 4 important factors for the court consider in determining the question of 5 jurisdiction". In determining appropriate jurisdiction in this case, 6 the court utilized the applicable sections of the UCCJEA codified in 7 the Tennessee Code Annotated. In doing so, the court determined that 8 the mother and child had lived in California for far more than the 9 requisite six months before the father filed his petition in Tennessee.
10 Further, the court found that the record was devoid of any evidence of 11 any current connection between the child and Tennessee other than the 12 fact that his father lived there. Consequently, the trial court was 13 correct in determining that California was the appropriate forum for 14 this dispute. (See pages 6-9 of Lee v. Lee attached herein).

15 After affirming the trial court's jurisdiction, the Lee court 16 turned to the issue of whether the various court orders entered prior 17 to that jurisdictional finding were rendered invalid by that decision.
18 In determining that those orders were rendered void by the jurisdiction 19 decision, the court reasoned that:

20 "since the trial court herein did not have jurisdiction to 21 determine the custody modification petition filed by Mr. Lee when 22 it was filed, it is certainly arguable that it did not have 23 jurisdiction to enter other orders regarding issues raised after 24 the filing of the petition. However, that does not mean they were 25 not valid for the pendency of the proceedings, but rather that 26 they have been rendered void by the decision on jurisdiction" 27 (See pages 9-10 of Lee v. Lee attached herein)

28 Lee stands on all fours with the facts of this case. Like, Lee, Tennessee was the proper home state at the onset of the custody dispute in this case. Like Lee, SEARLE lawfully moved to California with her daughter and lived there for more than six months before any new

1 custody dispute was filed. Like Lee, ALEXIS' only connection to 2 Tennessee was the fact that her father K.PFISTER resided there. Like 3 Lee, California was the proper home state for K. PFISTER's new motion 4 seeking change in custody and visitation. Like Lee, several motions 5 and hearings occurred over several months in Tennessee in spite of 6 SEARLE's continued objections to the jurisdiction of that state.
7 However unlike Lee, the Tennessee court in this case has yet to 8 recognize its mistake and acknowledge that California was the 9 appropriate state for litigation of custody in this case. Unlike Lee, 10 the Tennessee court ignored the purpose of the UCCJEA in order to force 11 a single mother living in California to fight for her daughter in 12 Tennessee solely because the father (K. PFISTER) lived there. Unlike 13 Lee, a mother has not seen her young daughter for over two years as a 14 result of the actions of a Tennessee court. Unlike Lee, a father with 15 little prior connection to his daughter, a criminal record involving 16 drugs, guns, and violence, a history of drug abuse and domestic 17 violence, and an inability to properly care for the child without 18 assistance now has custody of his daughter in either Tennessee or 19 Louisiana.

20 The Tennessee court's absolute refusal to acknowledge the purpose 21 of the UCCJEA or its bright line rules in this case is further 22 exacerbated by HOOVER/NATIONS' complete loss of impartiality and/or 23 fundamental fairness. There can no doubt that the dispute over ALEXIS 24 before HOOVER spanned from October 17, 1997 through at least June 23, 25 1999 when SEARLE's request to move to California with her daughter was 26 granted.

27 ///

28

1           There can be no doubt that this dispute was more often than not 2 caustic and wrought with almost constant accusations that could try the 3 patience of any reasonable judge. However, there is no case wherein 4 the court is justified in letting emotions or frustration get in the 5 way of applying the law fairly to both sides. Yet in this case, it is 6 clear that beginning in roughly March of 1999, HOOVER/NATIONS simply 7 let this dispute get the better of them and as a result, they misused 8 their judicial authority to punish and/or abuse SEARLE.

9           In his June 23, 1999 ruling, HOOVER acknowledged that his decision 10 meant California would take over jurisdiction of this case in six 11 months. Yet, roughly nine months later on March 9, 2000, he refused to 12 transfer jurisdiction to California and repeatedly ordered SEARLE and 13 ALEXIS to travel to Tennessee for further hearings. Between March of 14 2000 and June of 2001, HOOVER continued to order SEARLE and ALEXIS back 15 to Tennessee on short notice while refusing her ongoing efforts to 16 transfer jurisdiction to California. During the June 7, 2001 hearing, 17 HOOVER again refused to transfer jurisdiction even after acknowledging 18 that the only factors supporting his decision to keep jurisdiction was 19 the fact that K. PFISTER lived in Tennessee and he (HOOVER) was 20 apparently the only judge capable of addressing this case (See pg. 33 21 of Transcript in Exhibit 41). In spite of K. PFISTER's history of 22 perjury before him (See Exhibit 12), HOOVER took K. PFISTER at his word 23 in order to find SEARLE in contempt on a number of questionable 24 visitation complaints during the July 3, 2001 hearing. And in spite of 25 the fact that his ability to impose custody sanctions for contempt was 26 limited to ten days, he ordered SEARLE to serve some 590 days of 27 custody (See Exhibit 41). In evaluating the fairness of such a 28

1 sanction, it should be noted that during the early 1998 hearing related 2 to K. PFISTER's attempt to obtain emergency custody of ALEXIS, the 3 court determined that he had provided intentionally misleading and/or 4 untruthful pleadings and testimony (See Exhibit 11). In spite of this 5 blatant disrespect towards the court, K. PFISTER was not ordered to 6 serve even a single day of custody.

7 During that same June 23, 1999 hearing, HOOVER also awarded K.
8 PFISTER custody of ALEXIS in spite of the fact that she had lived with 9 her mother since birth, had limited relationship with her father and 10 there was no formal change in circumstances warranting such a change.
11 Further, HOOVER ordered this change in custody with full knowledge of 12 K. PFISTER's prior criminal, domestic violence, and drug abuse history 13 as well as the existence of the various mental health limitations that 14 would hinder his ability to care for his daughter without substantial 15 assistance.

16 Even after ALEXIS was returned to Tennessee pursuant to HOOVER's 17 improper orders, the Tennessee court's inability to impartially address 18 this case continued unabated. During the September 10, 2003, NATIONS
19 set aside over $18,000.00 in back child support due from K. PFISTER
20 while ordering SEARLE to now pay child support. During the November 21 18, 2003 hearing, NATIONS saw fit to permanently terminate SEARLE's 22 telephone contact with ALEXIS. This action effectively cut off all 23 contact between SEARLE and ALEXIS although it is unclear from NATIONS' 24 ruling exactly how this was deemed to be in the best interests of 25 ALEXIS. And during the April 29, 2004 hearing, NATIONS, like HOOVER, 26 ignored the limitations on his ability to impose custody as a sanction 27 and ordered SEARLE to serve another 120 days in custody simply because 28

1 she had failed to pay child support as ordered. It is important to 2 note that during the history of this dispute while K. PFISTER paid 3 little to no child support and ran up some $22,000.00 in arrearages, 4 neither HOOVER or NATIONS ever ordered K.PFISTER to serve a single day 5 in custody. Clearly, SEARLE has been subjected to an unfair and/or 6 unequal application of Tennessee law. Perhaps, had the Tennessee court 7 simply applied the UCCJEA correctly at the onset of the new custody
8 dispute in March of 2000, California could have addressed this case
9 fairly and saved both SEARLE and ALEXIS years of trauma and confusion 10 that will no doubt permanently impact the well being of both of them.

15 TENNESSEE COURT

16 In early 2001, after residing in California since June 25, 1999, 17 SEARLE sought to register the Tennessee custody orders. She further 18 requested modification of those orders. K. PFISTER immediately opposed 19 any modification arguing that Tennessee still had jurisdiction. In 20 reality, California had been the home state for purposes of 21 jurisdiction under the UCCJEA since December 25, 1999. Due to the fact 22 that K. PFISTER was able to utilize his father's resources in order to 23 engage counsel in both Tennessee and California while SEARLE was pro 24 per, he was able to cause various delays in the California proceeding.
25 However, SEARLE was finally able to appear before Judge Richard Denner 26 of the Los Angeles Superior Court on April 16, 2001. In reviewing the 27 transcript of this hearing (See Exhibit 40), two facts are clear.
28 First, Judge Denner had little interest in hearing the merits of SEARLE's jurisdiction motion and in fact, had little understanding as

1 to why the case was even on his calendar. And second, SEARLE did not 2 have a full understanding of the UCCJEA and lacked the legal training 3 to properly litigate the matter.

4 The reality here is that SEARLE and ALEXIS had been lawfully 5 residing in California for nearly nine months before K. PFISTER filed 6 his new custody motions in Tennessee. By the time SEARLE sought to 7 register the Tennessee custody orders in California and modify them, 8 she and ALEXIS had been lawfully residing in California for just short 9 of a year and a half. Based upon all of the facts discussed above, 10 there can be no doubt that jurisdiction should have been assumed at 11 that California hearing pursuant to California law. (See California 12 Family Code Section 3421 and 3427.

13 What is truly alarming is what was not discussed at that 14 California hearing. When Judge Denner and/or Judge Gold apparently 15 spoke to HOOVER, it is clear that the only representation made by 16 HOOVER was that there was a motion pending in Tennessee that related to 17 the residency of K. PFISTER. HOOVER apparently did not mention to the 18 California judge that he was planning on presiding over a whole lot 19 more than just a hearing on K. PFISTER's residency. In spite of the 20 fact that SEARLE and ALEXIS had resided in California for a year and a 21 half, HOOVER neglected to tell the California judge that he had every 22 intention of presiding over yet another hearing regarding the custody 23 of ALEXIS. There can be no doubt that HOOVER knew of these other 24 issues and intended to address them because K. PFISTER's pleadings 25 regarding a new request for custody had been filed well before the 26 hearing in California (See Exhibit 39). The transcript further reveals 27 that K. PFISTER's counsel was complicit in this lack of information as 28

1 he also argued during the California hearing that the only issue
2 pending in Tennessee was the hearing related to K. PFISTER's residency.
3 Had either HOOVER or K. PFISTER's counsel been forthcoming with this 4 information, there can be no doubt that Judge Denner would have been 5 far more attentive to SEARLE persistence regarding the jurisdiction 6 issue. Instead, he dismissed her arguments with little interest and 7 deferred jurisdiction to Tennessee in spite of the fact that the UCCJEA 8 and California law required him to do otherwise.

15 the State wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law

17 United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, 18 or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within 19 its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws. (United States

27 Between March 9, 2000 and April 29, 2004, the Williamson County 28 Juvenile Court in Tennessee (HOOVER and NATIONS) repeatedly failed to properly apply the UCCJEA and/or fairly apply Tennessee law. This

1 failure resulted in severe violations of SEARLE state and federal 2 constitutional rights to due process and equal protection. But most 3 importantly this failure violated her fundamental right to her 4 daughter. A daughter that was taken from her custody on June 17, 2003 5 and has not been returned in nearly two years. A daughter that she has 6 not even had the small privilege of speaking to on the telephone since 7 prior to November of 2003. This damage has been immeasurable and 8 cannot continue. SEARLE has a right to the application of the UCCJEA 9 in the same manner received by every other citizen. She should not be 10 denied that right merely because K. PFISTER has the benefit of a father 11 that will pay for attorneys to work tirelessly in two states to further 12 their ongoing hatred of SEARLE. In this case, "might does not make 13 right" and the only possible manner to correct this horrific violation 14 of SEARLE's rights as a parent and citizen of both California and the 15 United States of America is for this court to grant the requested 16 relief.

28 California Family Code Section 3428 and Tennessee Code Annotated Section 36-6-223). The facts in Hafer involved a 1977 divorce action

1 in San Diego California wherein the father and Plaintiff was granted 2 custody of the three children. The Plaintiff and the children then 3 spent the next three years living in Idaho. In June of 1981, the 4 mother and Defendant filed a child custody modification action in San 5 Diego County Superior Court alleging emergency grounds . Plaintiff 6 opposed the Defendant's motion on jurisdictional grounds under the 7 UCCJEA. He contended that Idaho had long since been the children's 8 home state and thus, the proper forum for Defendant's modification 9 motion. See Hafer at pgs 858-862. In concluding that Idaho was, in fact 10 the children's home state, the Hafer court reasoned as follows:

11 "Jurisdictional disputes under the UCCJEA are not "technical" in 12 the sense of being irrelevant to the welfare of the living 13 children involved. On the contrary, the act exists and defines 14 jurisdictional rules to best serve the interests of the hapless 15 children of divorce. The purpose of the act, as stated by its 16 drafters and by all the commentators, is to maximize continuity 17 and stability in the lives of these children and to minimize 18 disruption caused by continual dislocations and custody battles of 19 the warring parents. The act aims to make definite and 20 predictable rules of choice of forum by which the parties must 21 abide. If the courts do not enforce these rules in all cases, the 22 parties will continue to flout the law, the dissatisfied parent 23 always hoping some new forum will be more sympathetic to his or 24 her claim. The instability caused by refusal to enforce 25 jurisdictional rules (and also rules governing choice of forum) in 26 this area, as in no other, irreparably harms the interests of all 27 concerned, especially the children." See Hafer at pgs 865-866

28 "In re Marriage of Carney (1979) 24 Cal.3d 725, 730-731 strongly emphasizes children's need for stability and continuity. So also does the act. The home state concept is therefore of the utmost importance in the act, requiring the courts, when possible, to choose that forum to adjudicate custody disputes. The children's home is the presumptively correct forum. A showing of need to change custody does not alter the fact that the modification process will be less harmful to the children if conducted near their present home. Thus, here no reason appears to be favor the California forum unless one assumes inability of the Idaho courts to decide the matter fairly. There is no factual or legal basis for such an assumption and it violates the full faith and credit doctrine. It is counterproductive to the aim of continuity, which the act seeks to uphold, to drag children, as here, into a distant state to litigate and relitigate custody, simply because the noncustodial parent desires it." See Hafer at pg. 866

1 "The harm done to children by these experiences can hardly be 2 overestimated. It does not require an expert in behavioral 3 sciences to know that a child, especially during his/her early 4 years and the years of growth, needs security and stability of 5 environment and a continuity of affection. A child who has never 6 been given the chance to develop a sense of belonging and whose 7 personal attachments when beginning to form are cruelly disrupted, 8 may well be crippled for life, to his/her own lasting detriment 9 and the detriment of society." See Hafer at pgs. 866-867

10 What has been lost during the gamesmanship of K. PFISTER and 11 improper aid of HOOVER/NATIONS is the simple fact that at the center of 12 this litigation storm stands a little girl. A little girl, who almost 13 from birth has been caught in a heated custody battle. A little girl 14 who moved to California in June of 1999 amid the promise of a new start 15 and a stable home. A little girl who, less than eight months after 16 arriving in California, was forced to endure repeated short notice 17 trips to Tennessee for even more contentious hearings. A little girl 18 that just six weeks shy of her seventh birthday, last glimpsed her 19 mother in handcuffs before she was taken to Polinsky Center. A little 20 girl that, after being taken from her mother with little explanation, 21 was forced onto a plane and returned to Tennessee without the mother 22 she had spent her entire life with. A little girl who has not laid eyes 23 on her mother since June 17, 2003. There can be no doubt that the 24 damage to ALEXIS as a result of the last two years will be 25 immeasurable.

26 This case involves exactly the kind of case history the UCCJEA was 27 intended to stop. It involves the horrific damage to a young child 28 that can occur when an interstate custody battle runs amok. Had the UCCJEA been properly applied here, none of this damage would have occurred. Once HOOVER granted SEARLE's request to move to California, that state should have become the home state in six months. K. PFISTER

1 was determined to not let that happen. Roughly nine months later, he 2 began a constant stream of pleadings in Tennessee that sought contempt 3 findings on a myriad of issues as well as a change of custody. Rather 4 than honor the UCCJEA and transfer jurisdiction to California, 5 HOOVER/NATIONS took the bait presented by K. PFISTER and simply 6 continued to preside over the case as if SEARLE and ALEXIS still 7 resided in Tennessee.

8 California was the proper home state and had proper jurisdiction 9 over this dispute. K. PFISTER could have had a full and fair hearing 10 on his custody issues in California as he was no stranger to the 11 California courts and obviously had the resources to do so. The 12 California court would have had full access to all of the local 13 evidence and the impact and disruption of these proceedings to ALEXIS' 14 life would have been minimal. Instead, HOOVER/NATIONS ignored the 15 UCCJEA and applied their own law to the detriment of ALEXIS and her 16 mother.

19 SINCE ON OR ABOUT JUNE 16, 2003 DOES NOT RENDER TENNESSEE 20 THE NEW HOME STATE AND/OR THE APPROPRIATE STATE FOR JURISDICTION OF 21 CURRENT CUSTODY ISSUES

22 There have been UCCJEA cases wherein there has been substantial 23 delay before the cases were brought to a final conclusion and the 24 children were after a "wrongful removal". In these cases there have 25 been unanimous agreement that such delays, (i.e. time spent searching 26 for the children, locating an attorney, seeking law enforcement 27 assistance, or "judicial delays") cannot be considered and the case 28 must be dealt with as if the proverbial clock had stopped at the time of the children were wrongfully removed.

1 Events that have occurred after a wrongful removal or wrongful 2 retention cannot be considered by the court since to do so would 3 frustrate the purpose of the UCCJEA. This issue has been addressed by 4 various courts inside and outside of California and a sampling of these 5 holdings is included as follows:

6 "Subject matter jurisdiction either exists or does not exist at 7 the time when the petition is filed with the court... Facts developing 8 after that, such as the length of time the children have now been in 9 California, cannot be considered when determining whether the court 10 initially had jurisdiction to hear the action". Rexford v. Rexford 11 (Alaska 1980) 631 P.2d 475, 478.

12 "In our view, the better rule is that subject matter jurisdiction 13 either exists or does not exist at the time the action is commenced.
14 Otherwise the absconding parent is encouraged purposely to delay a 15 pending custody proceeding in order to gain time to establish 16 significant contact with the state". Plas v. Superior Court (1984) 155 17 Cal.App.3d 1008, 1015.

18 "We, as a court of law, must consistently refuse to condone what 19 has happened here if the aims of the act are ever to be achieved. It 20 is essential to discourage parents from unnecessary child stealing. So 21 long as they have any hope of succeeding in such maneuvers...they will 22 continue, regrettably, to engage in such conduct. The Legislature has 23 decided such conduct is not in the children's best interests. When we 24 apply the law we act in the children's interests." Hafer, Supra.

25 "On remand, the court may not consider Alyssa's current 26 circumstances; rather, the court must consider whether it had subject 27 matter jurisdiction as of January 2001 [Weller v. Weller (Wyo.1998) 960 28

1 P.2d 493, 496] To do otherwise 'would undermine the legislative 2 function, the purposes behind the UCCJEA's jurisdictional requirements, 3 and the basic doctrine of subject matter jurisdiction." In Re Alyssa F.
4 (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 846.

5 "The fact that the children have been in Florida since 1978 and that 6 Florida may now have become their 'home state' pending the lengthy 7 resolution of this appeal shall not be considered by the trial court in 8 determining jurisdiction". Hegler v. Hegler (Fla. App. 1981) 383 So.2d 9 1134, 1137.

10 There can be no doubt that California was the appropriate home 11 state for purposes of jurisdiction over the custody dispute raised by 12 K.PFISTER in March of 1999. Due to inability of the Tennessee court to 13 impartially apply the UCCJEA to this case and relinquish jurisdiction, 14 ALEXIS was taken from her mother in June of 2003 and she has not seen 15 her since. Due to SEARLE's pro per status after the loss of ALEXIS and 16 the Tennessee court's unwillingness to provide a copy of the relevant 17 court files, roughly two years have passed since ALEXIS was taken to 18 either Tennessee or Louisiana. For that reason, K.PFISTER will 19 undoubtedly suggest that Tennessee or Louisiana is now ALEXIS' home 20 state for purposes of jurisdiction over this dispute or that one of 21 those states is the more convenient forum. However, there can be no 22 doubt from the discussion above that ALEXIS removal from California 23 occurred pursuant to a Tennessee order that lacked proper jurisdiction.
24 As a result, that June 27, 2001 order and all subsequent orders issued 25 by that court in this case were invalid and remain so. Accordingly, 26 ALEXIS is being wrongfully held in Tennessee and the time period during

3 | CONCLUSION

4 | On June 16, 2003, SEARLE and ALEXIS were living happily in San
5 | Diego County. ALEXIS was in school and doing well while SEARLE was 6 | working and caring for her daughter's needs. On June 17, 2003, while
7 | trying to ensure proper steps were taken to address a domestic violence
8 | incident next door, their world was destroyed. The UCCJEA was created
9 | to avoid put an end to this type of destruction and the permanent 10 | damage interstate custody battles can cause to the development of 11 | children. K. PFISTER, with the aid of HOOVER/NATIONS, has managed to 12 | bypass the UCCJEA and realize his life goal of tormenting SEARLE in 13 | every way imaginable for as long as humanly possible. This court has an 14 | obligation to protect a California citizen from this type of intra-
15 | state abuse. For all of the reasons stated above, SEARLE respectfully
16 | requests that the court grant the following relief:

17 | Respondent TAMMY SEARLE requests that the court make the following
18 | findings:

- 19 | 1. The State of California had proper jurisdiction over custody
20 | issues related to Alexis Searle (aka: Pfister) as of December
21 | 25, 1999.
- 22 | 2. There were no substantive ties to Tennessee as of December 25,
23 | 1999 that would warrant continued jurisdiction over custody
24 | issues related to Alexis Searle (aka: Pfister).
- 25 | 3. Any Tennessee court orders related to custody of Alexis Searle
26 | (aka: Pfister) issued after December 25, 1999 lacked
27 | jurisdiction pursuant to UCCJA and were therefore invalid.
- 28 | 4. The removal of Alexis Searle (aka: Pfister) from California and transfer of her custody to Petitioner PFISTER pursuant to invalid Tennessee court orders was improper and a violation of the State and Federal Constitutional rights of Respondent SEARLE.

1 Respondent TAMMY SEARLE also requests that the court make the 2 following orders:

- 3 1. Petitioner PFISTER to return Alexis Searle (aka: Pfister) to 4 the custody of Respondent SEARLE in California.
- 5 2. Respondent SEARLE is to have sole custody of Alexis Searle 6 (aka: Pfister) subject to visitation as this court deems 7 appropriate.
- 8 3. Petitioner PFISTER is to pay child support and arrearages 9 subject to proof at hearing set by this court.
- 10 4. Respondent SEARLE's attorney's fees subject to proof at 11 hearing to be paid by Petitioner PFISTER.

v.

Daniel LEE.

No. W2003-01053-COA-R3-CV.

Assigned on Briefs March 22, 2004.

Dec. 29, 2004.

Appeal from the Chancery Court for Shelby County, No. D-27933-III; D.J. Alissandratos, Chancellor. Daniel M. Lee, Collierville, Tennessee, Pro Se.

Lee Ann Pafford Dobson, Germantown, Tennessee, for the appellee, Berta Margarita De Los Rios Lee. Paul G. Summers, Attorney General and Reporter; Pamela A. Hayden-Wood, Senior Counsel, In Defense of Tenn.Code Ann. § 36-6-101(a)(1).

PATRICIA J. COTTRELL, J., delivered the opinion of the court, in which WILLIAM C. KOCH, JR., P.J., M.S., and FRANK G. CLEMENT, JR., J., joined.

PATRICIA J. COTTRELL, J.

*1 As part of a divorce, the trial court granted custody of the parties' child to the mother, with visitation by the father. The father appealed, and this court affirmed the trial court. The father subsequently filed a petition to change custody. After lengthy proceedings brought on by various filings by the parties, the trial court ruled that it no longer had jurisdiction over the child's custody. We affirm the jurisdictional ruling, making all other issues moot.

Berta Margarita de Los Rios Lee and Daniel Mark Lee were married in Torrance, California in 1990. They moved to the Memphis area in 1993 when Mr. Lee, an employee of Federal Express, voluntarily transferred there. The parties' only child, William Alvaro Lee, was born in this state in 1994. The marriage relationship deteriorated, and in September of 1996, the wife returned to California with the child. In December of the same year, she filed a Complaint for Divorce in the Shelby County Chancery Court and asked the court to grant her custody of William. The husband filed an Answer and Counter-Complaint for Divorce and also asked for custody of William.

During the pendency of the divorce action the trial court entered a consent order allowing Mr. Lee two weeks of visitation with William every month. His periods of visitation were marked by apparent confusion on his part over their duration and by continuing conflicts over the boundaries of each parent's authority. The difficulties the parties experienced with visitation during this period are more fully recounted in Lee v. Lee, 66 S.W.3d 837 (Tenn.Ct.App.2001).

The parties ultimately stipulated to the grant of an absolute divorce pursuant to Tenn.Code Ann. § 36-4-129(b). The trial court conducted a bench trial to determine the question of custody and some undecided property issues, and subsequently entered a Final Decree of Divorce and granted custody of William to his mother. Mr. Lee was granted visitation every other weekend and additional visitation during Christmas and school vacations. On appeal, this court affirmed the trial court's custody and visitation arrangement. [FN1] See Lee v. Lee, supra. The decisions rendered by the trial court and by this court did not signal an end to the parties' struggles over visitation or custody.

[FN1. While we found the trial court's award of visitation to be appropriate, we noted that a change had been subsequently made in William's school schedule which could affect visitation. We accordingly directed the trial court to consider that change on remand.

I. TRIAL PROCEEDINGS AND ISSUES ON APPEAL

The proceedings that are the subject of this appeal began with the filing on November 19, 2001, by Mr. Lee of a Petition for Contempt [FN2] and to Change Custody. As he had in prior proceedings, Mr. Lee appeared pro se. The petition alleged that there had been a material change of circumstances and that Ms. Lee had tried to minimize or negate his relationship with William, to the detriment of the child. The mother's response denied the father's allegations and claimed that he had abused his visitation privileges in violation of specific provisions in the Final Decree and should himself be held in contempt.

[FN2]. Some of the contempt allegations related to disposition of real property in accordance with the divorce decree and are unrelated to custody and visitation issues.

In an unusual legal strategy, Mr. Lee's petition asking the court to change custody and find the mother in contempt for violating the prior custody and visitation order began with a challenge to the court's jurisdiction. That challenge was based on alleged constitutional infirmities in Tenn.Code Ann. § 36-6-601(a)(1), the statute authorizing courts to award custody. [FN3] The same or similar constitutional arguments would be raised by Mr. Lee with regard to almost every issue that arose.

[FN3]. The Attorney General was notified, as is required pursuant to Tenn. R. Civ. P. 24.04, and intervened.

*2 Mr. Lee's choice of litigation strategy was unsuccessful and even counterproductive, for not only did he fail to achieve a change of custody, but his visitation rights were suspended and he was unable to get them restored. We have read all the transcripts of proceedings in the record (six in all), as well as reviewing all the filings. [FN4] Although we have determined that only the jurisdictional issue need be resolved in this appeal, we will briefly discuss the more significant proceedings in the trial court to give a better understanding of the context of the rulings. The parties filed many, or as the trial court once observed, "innumerable," motions, and throughout a series of hearings, the trial court attempted to deal with those motions in an orderly fashion based on the parties' setting them for hearing and in recognition of the interdependence of some of them.

[FN4]. We note that the mother was not present at any of those hearings, although she was represented by counsel. The father was pro se, and was not called as a witness. The hearings focused almost exclusively on arguments on legal issues or procedural motions.

Along with her answer and counterclaim the mother filed a motion for a psychological examination of Mr. Lee under Tenn. R. Civ. P. 35. She contended that the father's mental condition was in controversy because he had allowed his son to view inappropriate violent material and had inflicted emotional abuse upon him during visitation. She alleged the examination was necessary due to concerns about the father's fitness for unsupervised visitation.

The father filed a response to the motion in which he stated that the court had already issued such an order on January 24, 2001, so a new order was not necessary, even though he had not yet complied. [FN5] He also re-asserted constitutional challenges to the statute authorizing courts to make custody awards. The trial court conducted a hearing and granted the mother's motion, expressing its own concerns based on its observations. The court determined that the father's psychological status had to be determined not only for the purpose of custody and visitation, but also for the question of whether he was competent to proceed in the litigation. The court stated that "the threshold at issue in any litigation is first and foremost the competence of someone to be able to proceed." The detailed order filed by the court included a strict schedule for the father to submit to an evaluation by the professional named by the mother.
